Burkman Bros.

The sibling duo behind the label that dresses the rugged men we love show us L.A. their way.

The Burkman Bros.' signature look is utilitarian, effortless, and classic; their lifestyle is a little Far East in West Hollywood.

1. Mister Freedom Organized by concept—Depression-era work wear, colonial garb—this vintage shop offers entire looks at a glance. The clothes span the 1850s to the present, and the store's selection of secondhand work boots is amazing. French expat owner Christophe Lorion also stocks textiles and vintage books as well as his own line of T-shirts, bags, and customized one-of-a-kind creations, making this spot a go-to for the fashion cognoscenti. 7161 Beverly Blvd., (323) 653-2014; MisterFreedom.com

2. Thai Sabai Massage Don't let the words Thai and massage fool you: No happy endings here, but still a great way to start or end your day. Relax and boost your chi for cheap with a no-frills traditional massage. 1951 Westwood Blvd., (310) 470-1881

3. Ron Herman Melrose Get designer duds for dudes here, including the entire Burkman Bros.' spring '09 collection—classy and classic! 8100 Melrose Ave., (323) 651-4129; RonHerman.com

4. Urth Caffé A-listers like Jake Gyllenhaal wait in line just like the plebes at this extremely popular all-organic hot spot. The Burkman boys love Urth's organic iced lattes with rice milk—not to mention the perfect people-peeping patio. 8565 Melrose Ave., West Hollywood, (310) 659-0628; UrthCaffe.com

5. Shintaro Sushi This low-key strip-plaza sushi joint features a full bar and serves the freshest fish without a fuss: tasty and unpretentious. Order the albacore sashimi with crispy onion. 1900 N. Highland Ave., Suite 5, (323) 882-6524; ShintaroSushi.com
